

Scott
10/17/50
Eng. 333(a) 2

Handwritten: Scott
Handwritten: Eng. 333(a) 2

Practical jokes do not always have the expected ending. When a Greyhound bus driver was executing a hairpin curve on a detour in the hill country of East Tennessee, a timid woman asked if he ever saw any wild animals there. "Certainly", he replied. K. P. And to her question as to types, he said, "Oh, elephants, lions, tigers--." Vague reference? Just then they completed the turn and to the consternation of the driver and the passengers, except for the timid woman, an elephant loomed in the narrow road ahead. A traveling circus was also taking the bypass.

the bus